Investigation

Posted by undertaker1 - 06 Jan 2012 01:03

_____

Lastnight i went on a emergency investigation to help a family in need. The night was very slow and not much happening besides a few touches and some low sounds. I didn't think there was much there until reviewing evp's today. I caught a few voices that were minor things like hey and help but the big catch so far was the voice saying he fights hell. It was refrencing me at this point knowing what i was there to do. I am not sure yet what i am dealing with and still have a few hours of review left but these things know why we are there and what we are capable of doing to them. The joy of being a investigator is to help others understand and get rid of what is scaring them or messing with them. This should be your number one priority as a investigator. The joy of helping others in need is a great reward in itself.

==========