Tolomato Cemetery/St. Augustine, Florida

Posted by Steven Matrix - 22 Sep 2011 11:38

My wife and I headed to Tolomato Cemetery in St. Augustine last week. Pictured in the photo is the grave of James, a child who died at 5 years of age. James is supposedly the star of the cemetery as some say they've seen him in a tree and one paranormal person has an evp where supposedly he is talking to her.

Tolomato Cemetery is the oldest catholic cemetery in the country [as told to us by a lady who is involved in the preservation society].

Tolomato Cemetery is opened only the 3rd Saturday of every month.

==========

Re: Tolomato Cemetery/St. Augustine, Florida

Posted by polarice7000 - 23 Sep 2011 12:38

I have gone to the cemetery, it is truly chilling is something strange ... Let's find out ..

==========

Re: Tolomato Cemetery/St. Augustine, Florida

Posted by Steven Matrix - 23 Sep 2011 20:27

Polar, we found the cemetery to be pleasant; and we see the spiritual occupants as friends we haven't met yet. Lol.

==========

Re: Tolomato Cemetery/St. Augustine, Florida

Posted by TressesOfNephthys - 23 Sep 2011 22:29

Steven Matrix wrote:

crystalcross wrote:

I'm thinking you're right. When I pulled up the TIFF high resolution image you sent me, the shape lost its cohesion. So I think this one was just a case of matrixing.

CC, I cropped the fork of the tree and there may be something there; but I will let you and the folks decide.

Well, it could definitely be a shadow or a play of the light (hard to tell with the black and white) but there looks like two children in the tree.

==========

Re: Tolomato Cemetery/St. Augustine, Florida
Posted by TressesOfNephthys - 23 Sep 2011 22:33

_____

labeled what I see here

==========

Re: Tolomato Cemetery/St. Augustine, Florida
Posted by Steven Matrix - 23 Sep 2011 23:54

_____

TressesOfNephthys wrote:

labeled what I see here

Yes Tress, those are what appear to be faces to me as well. One of them [right] could even be a native American.

==========

Re: Tolomato Cemetery/St. Augustine, Florida
Posted by TressesOfNephthys - 24 Sep 2011 00:08

_____

The figure on the right isn't very clear though I think it could be a boy. The one on the left though, seemed to be a very apple-cheeked little girl with chin-length hair.

==========

Re: Tolomato Cemetery/St. Augustine, Florida
Posted by Steven Matrix - 24 Sep 2011 00:31

_____

TressesOfNephthys wrote:

The figure on the right isn't very clear though I think it could be a boy. The one on the left though, seemed to be a very apple-cheeked little girl with chin-length hair.

Tress, see what is below the limb on the right hand side. This is where I said "maybe" there's a native American. Cut out what's above the limb on the right hand side.

==========

Re: Tolomato Cemetery/St. Augustine, Florida
Posted by TressesOfNephthys - 24 Sep 2011 00:40

Ok I do see what you're saying now, but not sure if that is its own face or part of the boy's body. The boy I see, his head is above the limb. He's got sort of a grown out buzz cut hair do.

==========

Re: Tolomato Cemetery/St. Augustine, Florida
Posted by Steven Matrix - 24 Sep 2011 00:46

TressesOfNephthys wrote:

Ok I do see what you're saying now, but not sure if that is its own face or part of the boy's body. The boy I see, his head is above the limb. He's got sort of a grown out buzz cut hair do.

The wife saw that at first too. The little girl was my first find, but who knows; it could even be a little boy with long hair, although it more resembles a girl.

If it hadn't of been for CC, I would have ignored the photo.

==========